It's been a busy summer for restaurant openings, and fall 2015 is shaping up to be exciting as well. Here's the rundown on 25 of the openings coming up in the next few months. Check back often; new information and restaurants will be added throughout the season.

BOSTON

Coppersmith

A massive space that will include food trucks parked inside, a rooftop raw bar, a cafe, and more. "We are not reinventing the culinary wheel," executive chef Chris Henry, a Barbara Lynch Gruppo alum, previously said via press release. "Exceptional seasonal ingredients, a focus on flavor, easy to understand dishes, but executed with precision and attention to detail. Just great food without pretense." Paul Bruno, a Glynn Hospitality Group alum, is general manager, and the Red Door Hospitality Group (John Childs, Travis Talbot, and more) is behind the project. 40 West Third St., Boston (South Boston).

Opening Date: September 8, 2015.

Ocean Prime

More fancy steak for the Seaport District. Ohio-based chain Ocean Prime will join Del Frisco's in feeding expensive meat (and seafood) to Seaport's big spenders. The company will put nearly $4 million into building the space, which will seat more than 300 diners. 142 Northern Ave., Boston

State Street Provisions

The Grafton Group is finally crossing the river. The owners of Harvard Square (and nearby) restaurants Russell House Tavern, Grafton Street, PARK, and Temple Bar will open State Street Provisions in the former City Landing space by the Aquarium this fall. "It'll be somewhat of a hybrid of Russell House and PARK," said co-owner Patrick Lee previously. "It has a little bit of both of those venues, and I think that space might take a little bit more from PARK, and maybe the menu might take a little bit more from Russell House." 255 State St., Boston (Downtown). Opening Date: Early November 2015.
